Presence's Cultural Mission:
Bridging the Cultural and Generational Divide

Dictated by Dr. Agnes Ip
Recorded and edited by Presence Editorial Team

Committing to The "Cultural Mission"

Presence was born in September 2003, out of a vision from God, to serve the needs of this generation. In the past, Presence has always been committed to responding to the needs of the times, while constantly evolving and growing in our intergenerational ministries. The theme of our fifteenth anniversary is "Presence's Cultural Mission: Bridging The Cultural and Generational Divide," which expresses our determination to continue our intergenerational ministries and renew our commitment to the "cultural mission."

"Culture" basically refers to the personal thoughts and way of life that are shaped by the social environment and the people around us. Although the universal values of today's secular society are not completely hostile to the core values of Christianity, they are becoming more polarized. When we mentioned missions in the past, we would think of evangelism to people of different races and regions from our own. But now, the mission targets may be close at hand -- in the same community, work place, school, or even family! The emergence of Presence is to help and equip believers to learn to live out their faith in a polarized environment, to express their boundaries and bottom line, to release goodwill with a gentle attitude, and to live with people in society with the love of Christ. This is cultural mission, and this is also the mission of Presence.

Bridging The Generational Divide

For the establishment of healthy families, the building-up of intergenerational relationships, the guarding of a new generation of faith, and the equipping of young people to enter society, the three ministries and directions of "Presence Quotient ®," "RE:NEW a Presence movement" and "Presence Possibilities" were established in the past few years, and they have become the basic pillars of Presence's intergenerational service.

In recent years, the competition in society has become more and more fierce. In the United States and Asia, people are facing increasingly bigger pressures and challenges, and they may get lost while searching for life directions. Even believers are inevitably affected. In response, our ministry has started to focus on promoting the "Presence Life Planning Curriculum" a year ago. Our goal is to train believers to examine their own lives (including their values, ambitions, relationships, attitudes toward life and their own life priorities) and to help them understand the moral boundaries and principles of life that they should hold on to when faced with pressures, temptations, and difficulties, so that they may live out their faith in such a challenging time. This is a long-term spiritual and psychological education project, and it is also the direction in which Presence is heading.

Therefore, in addition to continuing the all-around intergenerational ministry, we hope to cooperate with churches and seminaries to serve more groups and wider audiences with the "Presence Life Planning Curriculum." As for our ministry in Hong Kong, our prayer is to introduce the whole course into different high schools, so that we may instill ideals and hopes in a new generation to counteract a society full of negativities.

When the entire "Presence Life Planning Curriculum" is complete and adjusted according to different ages, backgrounds and needs, we intend to develop online courses or online follow-up groups. In the end, we hope to launch a course to train trainers and mentors to benefit more people. We also plan to design Bible study materials related to the course for church groups to use. If God allows, we hope that one day, Presence can become a life education center, serving people of different generations, helping them establish a healthy and biblical attitude toward life in order to shine for the Lord.

Walking with God: My Personal Experience at Presence

Looking back at Presence's path of growth over the past 15 years, I have a countless number of special experiences and utmost gratitude. Among them, I have to mention a miracle that we experienced last year. During the time when Presence had been undergoing the most financial hardship, God miraculously let my husband win a jackpot in a lucky draw -- a luxury sports car! Just when we were full of gratitude, resold the sports car and took cash to help pay the salaries of Presence coworkers, we encountered many obstacles. I thought to myself: God has provided for us in such a surprising way, so why is it not going well? It turned out that God wanted me to let go of my personal rational thoughts and learn to be completely obedient. I realized that God often performs miracles for Presence and sends others to help, but sometimes He delays provision in order to teach us to learn how to wait and to be completely obedient. The Holy Spirit also said to me, "You must allow me to do whatever I want, at any time and in any way." In other words, I can't restrict or hinder God's actions -- not just in the single experience of the car, but in the ministry of the organization too. Although we have to plan carefully, the results are in God's hands; we cannot and do not need to control.

In fact, in the past fifteen years, God has let Presence experience some "small achievements," but there is still a gap between the actual situation and what my heart is eager to see in regard to how God uses Presence to influence society and faith groups. God wants me to learn to persist and obey. The reason why I can persist is because in this ministry, I have experienced the wonderful work of God: I saw that in different stages of ministry, God arranged different brothers and sisters to serve together; I saw that children's lives were changed after being guided by our teachings; I saw that family relationships were revived after receiving our services and counseling; I saw that even pastors benefited from our ministry. As Romans 15:13 says: "May the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace as you trust in him, so that you may overflow with hope by the power of the Holy Spirit." In our ministry ahead, we should understand that hope is in God and rely upon the power of the Holy Spirit. Since God has given such a great "intergenerational cultural mission" to Presence, this is not something that can be done by people alone; but I am convinced that God, who is the author and finisher, will be able to use Presence to fulfill His will for this age!

I sincerely invite you, who support and love Presence, to continue walking with us and God; together, we will meet the challenge of fulfilling the cultural mission ahead!

Partnering with Presence
– Chinese Bible Missions Church:
A Special Interview with Rev. Maurice Yu

Editorial Team

Though it seems like not so long ago, Presence has been serving churches and communities for 15 years. As we reviewed our ministry's history, we found out that our relationship with Chinese Bible Missions Church (CBMC) dates back to 2008; that means we have partnered with each other for 10 years. Our service covers a wide spectrum of ministries and groups of people, including youth fellowship, young couples, parenting, clinical psychology, and even Bible study seminars. Of these, there have been a number of big events that not only served the church body, but also believers from other churches and families in the community. Chinese Bible Missions Church is one of the churches that regularly provides financial support to Presence. We are truly grateful for such a precious partnership, which comforts and propels us in times of difficulty.

One Tuesday morning we met with Rev. Maurice Yu (CMBC Liaison Pastor) at the church office and had a blessed and meaningful conversation.

Editor: We know that as early as 2010, Presence and your church jointly organized a large scale family ministry conference to provide training in different aspects for families; there were educational workshops to meet the needs of both parents and children. Rev. Yu, how did you learn about Presence? What's your experience working with Presence?

Rev. Yu: I have been with CBMC for about 12 to 13 years. I am sorry that personally, I do not recall being involved in the said family ministry conference. Back then, I was younger and was helping with the student and young adult ministries. That's why I connected with Presence -- because Dr. Agnes Ip helped provide training at our fellowship.

Editor: From a pastoral point of view, how do you see the ministries of Presence? Do you think your congregants will benefit from the services and ministries provided by Presence?

Rev. Yu: From a pastoral point of view, I see increasingly the importance of Presence's ministries. The majority of the CBMC congregants are immigrants from Hong Kong. As an immigrant, there is a lot of pressure to adjust to life in the United States, as well as connect with the mainstream culture. Also, Chinese are generally more reserved and not willing to open up and share about their challenges at home and in their lives. It is not easy for our church to shepherd them in a way that really meets their needs. Presence comes in and helps us broaden our horizon; it shows us the pulse of the society, the difference between two generations, and the needs of this time so that we know how to help our congregants live their faith in their daily lives, while they feel their struggles are understood. Also, the practical and realistic family life training gives us an opportunity to make the gospel relevant and bless the families in the community with gospel and parenting education.

As our church grew, we saw the college students and young adults, who used to be the majority of our congregants, get married and raise families of their own; young families are the majority of our church now. Believers' search for life direction, emotional management, marriage, and getting along with the next generation have created different needs. As our church does not have leaders with special training in psychology and counselling to help them grow in these areas, Presence's partnership is valuable in ministering to them, and we are grateful for that.

Editor: What's your expectation and hope for Presence?

Rev. Yu: I would like to see Presence continue to respond to the needs of our next generation and to help believers raise their children with understanding and trust so that they can pass on the baton of sharing the gospel and faith in their families. As Presence has a rich and wide interaction with the community, I would also like to see Presence provide training to pastors to increase our sensitivity to the socio-culture, so that we will be better equipped to effectively lead the believers to grow and truly live their faith in their daily lives.

This is a time full of pressure. It's inevitable that believers will face challenges, especially when dealing with the cultural difference of two generations. We are thankful that the pastoral leaders at Chinese Bible Missions Church can feel the challenges of this generation's believers and are willing to work with us as one, go hand in hand with us in serving families, and help believers truly live their faith. As Presence steps into another 15 years, we are looking forward to partnering with more churches to minister to believers and see more families grow and be blessed.

Walking with Presence

An Interview with Victor Chen

Interviewed by Maggie Hui

Time has flown by as Presence has already entered its 15th year. We are thankful that over the years, God has provided many people to walk with us, supporting us in various ways. One of such fellow travelers is brother Victor Chen, who in the past 10 years has helped us with our print jobs and has willingly delayed our payment periods over and over again. On top of that, Victor helped recruit students for our recent "Presence Life Planning Curriculum" in Southern California. So what prompted this brother to be Presence's fellow traveler?

I cordially thank Victor to find time out of his busy schedule to meet with me at our office to share about his walk with Presence.

Maggie: When did you come to know Presence?

Victor: I remember it was about one year before Proposition 8 (Writer's note: A proposal in 2008 to amend the California Constitution to limit the definition of marriage to a union between a man and a woman) when I was introduced to Presence by Rev. Morson Chiu. Presence needed printing help at that time, and I was happy to assist.

Later, I took the young people from our church to attend a conference hosted by Presence on the topic of homosexual issues. My two daughters were in their teen years at the time, and though they both grew up at church, their viewpoints regarding certain topics, such as homosexuality, were very different from ours. I then realized that there was a gap between the two generations caused by the age difference as well as differences between Eastern and Western cultures. As the older generation, oftentimes we do not communicate our viewpoints on these issues with the next generation. As a result, the next generation see our actions, but they may not understand the values behind these actions; they may not even agree with what we do! I observe that quite a number of young people leave church after entering college, not because they do not love God, but because they cannot agree with the way the older generation do things.

Maggie: What drove you to support the ministry of Presence?

Victor: Times are changing rapidly, especially in California, what our next generation learn at public school is very different from biblical values, and sometimes they may even be contrary to each other, but many parents may not understand the magnitude of the challenges faced by their children. I deeply feel that as parents, we must learn to communicate more effectively with our next generation, instead of forcing our value system on them.

I have found that Presence can provide help in this regard. Presence has always been committed to being a bridge between the two generations, promoting communications between the two sides, and helping them understand each other better. I strongly agree with this and believe that this is much needed by the Chinese church as well.

Maggie: What are your hopes and vision for Presence?

Victor: In my opinion, Presence is still not widely-known among non-Cantonese churches or Chinese communities. Therefore, I am trying to introduce Presence to more Mandarin churches. On the other hand, any one church or Christian organization is like a lone soldier on the battlefield, and I hope that Presence can be a liaison and connect different churches, so that we can pool together different gifts and resources to equip believers more effectively, to enhance communications between different generations, and to build more harmonious families.

Having participated in the recent "Presence Life Planning Curriculum," I believe this is a good direction for the development of Presence. If we want to help others, our lives need to renew and grow. I hope more people, especially young Christians, can attend and benefit from this course.

During my conversation with brother Victor, I deeply felt his humility and caring love for the next generation. Being a grandfather has not stopped him from learning and seeking growth. He repeatedly mentioned that as Chinese parents, we must find ways to communicate with the younger ones in order to narrow the age and cultural gaps between generations. Victor's support of Presence is clearly shown through his participation in and promotion of our events, as well as his encouraging and affirming words; all these have touched my heart, and I am thankful to God.

Although we cannot interview Presence's fellow travelers one by one, we sincerely appreciate all your support along the way for the past 15 years. We thank God for each of you; walking together with you has been truly precious!

Serving with Presence

Dedicate The Second Half of My Life to Family Ministry

Jennifer Wong

A few years ago, I began to consider early retirement, and I was asking myself: How should I spend the second half of my life? Where would God place me to continue serving Him? While I pondered these thoughts, I came across "Presence." Dr. Agnes Ip's husband was my colleague, and he invited me to attend Presence's 10th Anniversary vision-sharing dinner. During the event, I learned that they were about to launch a multiple intelligence, college major and career assessment and consultation service targeting elementary to high-school students and even young working adults. I was very interested in this idea and service approach.

Dr. Ip later invited me to attend Presence's weekly staff prayer meeting, from which I began to have a better understanding of their vision and the areas of their ministries. Indeed, I totally agreed with their mission: in this era where values and moral standards are distorted, it is imperative to protect families and children and to equip believers to live out Christ in their everyday lives. I was also very touched by Dr. Ip and her coworkers' diligence and dedication. Time and again, Presence has experienced financial hardship trying to maintain ministry operations and development. However, seeing how Presence has overcome one obstacle after another through God's wonderful provision has assured me of God's approval of this ministry. When Dr. Ip invited me to join Presence's family ministry team, I decided to pray about it. God touched me multiple times as I prayed, and He made His leading clear to me in my circumstances; so I embarked on this ministry journey in awe of God as I became a volunteer part-time coworker for Presence. It's been three years since then.

Through participating in the consultation services, I realize that many Asian parents do not have a good understanding of their children's strengths, personality traits, nor learning styles. Compounding the issues of generational and cultural gaps with parenting styles, the relationships between parents and children often become very tense, and misunderstanding and conflicts are inevitable. I remember once a parent called us to make an appointment to have her child's multiple intelligence and learning style assessed. During the conversation, I felt that the parent was worried because she did not see her child's strength and future. However, the assessment results showed that this child had great potential in many areas. Under Dr. Ip's guidance, the child was able to express his thoughts and dreams, which the parent had not realized before. Out of love, this parent was willing to learn to speak in a more encouraging and positive manner and to help her child develop his dreams and potential. Instantly, I saw that the parent's understanding of her child deepened, their communication and relationship enhanced, and their family dynamics improved. This made me very delighted and more convinced of the value of this ministry.

Besides serving in the consultation area, I have had opportunities to speak at parenting and marriage workshops. As an introvert, this task is very challenging. Yet, it is a great opportunity for me to grow and experience God. From researching and organizing materials, to designing the slides, to delivering the message, I have kept on praying, asking God to inspire me with the right content and Bible verses, to help ease my anxiety, to prepare the hearts of the audience, and to deliver His message through me. Not long ago, after speaking at a workshop, I learned that one person from the audience felt that the message was directed at him; immediately he invited the pastor to pray for him and his marriage. I was deeply moved, and I thank God for using me as a speaker to serve.

What can bring me more joy and satisfaction than knowing that God is coworking with me and using me, this "jar of clay," to bless others and to spread His love? I hope that in the second half of my life I will continue to respond to God's calling and see more changed lives and blessed families through serving with Presence!

Growing with Presence

Wicy Zhang's Testimony

Wicy Zhang

I first knew of Presence through friends from church back in 2016. From there, I started at Presence as a volunteer helping out with website banners and photography. Upon graduating from college, I was blessed with the opportunity of working with Presence as a contractor doing social media. After a couple of weeks, God opened a door for me to a full-time position at Presence! To any young adult after graduating, this was definitely a great opportunity. And now, after being with Presence for over a year, I can say that it's been a fruitful time. Not only have I seen Presence grow in many ways thanks to the blessings that God has graciously given, but I have also experienced how much working with Presence has grown me.

When starting out at Presence, I knew it was a ministry-driven organization with a vision to reach out to the Chinese community. I felt that what they were doing was beneficial and helpful to the community. Serving at my home church, I already had a glimpse of what serving in ministry was like - it is not easy. In fact, it requires a lot of mental and physical energy, as well as faith, to fully serve in ministry. Serving at Presence has taught me the importance of having full confidence in the Lord for His provision and guidance in all areas of service, amidst the many challenges and struggles that come with serving.

There have been many challenges that we all face together at Presence, such as financial difficulties, finishing projects, and coordinating events that seem impossible to fulfill just to name a few. Despite those hardships, we have all been able to lean on the Lord for his provision and guidance. Together, we practice having hope in our Father who sees our every need and trouble, and by enduring, we recognize how He has graciously provided for us.

When coordinating my first Faith Seminar event, I remember it being the biggest challenge for me while serving at Presence. I knew fully that I was not skilled at event planning; however, throughout the entire process, God showed me His greatness and provision despite my lack of skills in that area. He provided people to help fill in those areas where I was lacking, and together as one, we accomplished much more than what only one person could do. Many of the staff here at Presence provided support and help, giving great encouragement when I faced challenges during the planning process - from reaching out to pastors and churches to the logistics of the event. The turnout was beyond our imagination: youths from 11 different churches attended the seminar that evening with cheerful attitudes, and many of them were challenged by the message and responded to the altar call afterwards!

Earlier, I had shared that my hopes and goal while working here was to be able to grow. Though I started with doing social media in mind, Presence has actually grown me in different ways. Through assisting with coordinating the Faith Seminar for RE:NEW and filming video projects for all three tracks (Presence Quotient ®, RE:NEW a Presence movement, and Presence Possibilities), I have been able to develop the skills and talents with which God has gifted me. In the office, I am known as the office daughter among many of the office mothers. What I have learned about the women I work alongside with is that they are passionate about God and passionate about sharing in ministry together. I also learned that in an organization such as Presence, where many people collaboratively work together on different tasks, it requires endurance.

Professionally, I practiced being more organized when it comes to presenting and accomplishing tasks. Presence has also helped me grow in interpersonal skills in an office environment. I learned to be able to communicate with people who are much wiser and older than me; working with people who are more mature than I am is no longer as daunting as it seemed. Personally, I was somewhat reserved as a person in the beginning. Simple things such as answering the phone and talking with people came as a challenge to me; however, God has given me peace now and I've been able to approach phone calls with a much better attitude.

Working here has taught me that with ministry, it is not about ourselves, but more importantly, about how to better serve the community and fulfill the ministry's mission - God's mission. Spiritually, through the challenges I have experienced here at Presence, working here has grown my faith in Christ. There have been discouraging and stressful times; however, God has reassured me that He is present. As I continue here at Presence, I hope to constantly remain challenged and grow in Him as well as serve the best that I can, as God has created me to do.
